

LARRY DOYLE

Larry Doyle grew up in a big Catholic family in Boston. His father was a lawyer. His mother was a real estate agent. He was one of eight siblings, five of whom landed work on Wall Street. His online blog, Sense on Cents, rises fearlessly above Wall Street's greed, hype and obfuscation.

Larry embarked on his Wall Street career in 1983 as a mortgage-backed securities trader for The First Boston Corporation. While there he was involved in the growth and development of the secondary mortgage market from its near infancy.

After close to 7 years at First Boston, Larry joined Bear Stearns in early 1990 as a mortgage trader. In 1993, Larry was named a Senior Managing Director at the firm. He left Bear to join Union Bank of Switzerland in late 1996 as Head of Mortgage Trading. In 1998, after 15 years of trading and precipitated by Swiss Bank's takeover of UBS, Larry moved from trading to sales as a senior salesperson at Bank of America. His move into sales led him to the role as National Sales Manager for Securitized Products at JP Morgan Chase in 2000. He was integrally involved in developing the department, directly hiring 40 salespeople, implementing a variety of sales programs, and growing revenues exponentially. He left JP Morgan in 2006.

His first book In Bed with Wall Street: The Conspiracy Crippling Our Global Economy is scheduled to be released in January, 2014 by Palgrave MacMillan.

"A juicy insider's account of the incestuous deal between Wall Street and captured regulators, detailing how years after the financial crisis of 2008, powerful interests have allowed the big banks to survive and thrive. Whistleblowers? Check. Corrupted regulators? Check. Financial fraud victims? You'll hear from everyone in Larry Doyle's gem." Erin Arvedlund, author of "Too Good to Be True: The Rise and Fall of Bernie Madoff"
